The name comes from the fact that the player can only visit the upper world by making a ascension, then, the route would be infinite. The game has a quite simple gameplay, the player has to make his way through the levels by taking various objects, or even enemies, avoiding enemies and getting to the end of the level. In the game the player can play against the computer at the five different levels (including a bonus level), with only one attack and a few different collectible items. The player can also play with a friend in two game modes, Deathmatch and Rotation, where they have to pass from one point to another. Also, a bigger challenge is the fact that the object are rotating and the player can't restart a level if he drops the object he is carrying.Q: Numpy: how to find point of intersection of two vectors? I have two vectors, a and b. I need to find the point where they cross. For example (given the vectors start at y=0, x=0 for both): a = [1,3] b = [2,4] yields the point (0, 0) Here is my code that doesn't do what I want. I can't seem to find the solution...any help is appreciated... import numpy as np c = np.cross(a,b) print(c) Thanks! A: In your case, perhaps this is a simpler approach: import numpy as np def vector_intersection(v1, v2): return np.linalg.norm(v1 - v2) a = [1,3] b = [2,4] print(vector_intersection(a,b)) A: to find an intersection of any 2 vectors, you need intersect = v1 * v2 = norm(v1)* 0cc13bf012

Unlike traditional video technology, digital video technology is not limited to televisions, videos, video recorders, video telephones, video games, and other devices that reproduce video. Instead, video technology can be found on a wide variety of devices, such as personal digital assistants, video cameras, laptop computers, cellular telephones, and pagers. For example, today's smart phones are considered to be miniature personal computers that can store and play data, like computer games and multimedia files. However, when sending the data, the phone must communicate the data over a radio link, such as a cellular radio link. Furthermore, portable wireless device users expect a device to have a display. This expectation is particularly true for the smart phone because the device
