Ameliorative effect of Moringa oleifera against hydrogen peroxide induced oxidative stress by targeting NF- $\kappa$ B, Cyt-c and Apoptosis in human neuroblastoma cell line SH-SY5Y. Cellular defense system and oxidative stress are considered as key regulators of apoptosis. Excessive concentration of reactive oxygen species (ROS) leads to oxidative stress due to extensive oxidative phosphorylation. Abnormal ROS is associated with many pathological conditions including cancer. In this study, ameliorative effect of Moringa oleifera against hydrogen peroxide induced oxidative stress were investigated in human neuroblastoma cell line SH-SY5Y. Cell viability, ROS, glutathione (GSH), superoxide dismutase (SOD), catalase (CAT), GSH peroxidase (GSH-Px), malondialdehyde (MDA), DNA fragmentation, Bcl-2, Bax, caspase-3, -8, -9, Cyt-c and nuclear factor-kappa B (NF-κB) expressions were evaluated. Pretreatment of SH-SY5Y cells with Moringa oleifera extract (MOE) followed by hydrogen peroxide administration for 48 h showed reduced cell mortality, ROS, MDA and increased GSH contents with concomitant up-regulation of SOD, CAT, GSH-Px, Bcl-2 and NF-κB expressions and down-regulation of caspase-3, -8 and -9 and DNA fragmentation. Therefore, MOE appears to maintain cellular redox homeostasis by its free radical scavenging, antioxidant, anti-apoptotic activities and anti-inflammatory potentials. MOE may be beneficial in the management of neurodegenerative disorders.
