Nirvana was a company specialized in gravity research. At first, all they had was a spinning room, and the desire to, one day, be able to manipulate space-time, and therefore, gravity itself. Then came the day: they finally made it! All the equations were right, and that led the Nirvana Facility to prosperous times. For around two hours. Gravity could do so much more than deform space time, so much more. And they found it in a "not so good" way. They ended up colliding their dimension with someone else's, opening a very unexpected gateway. What, or who, did they find in the other side? The puzzles on this game usually present you with a situation, with no obvious way out. You must use all the resources at your disposal to proceed, and keep moving forward. You play as Tom Walker, a security guard that wakes up in an empty room inside the Nirvana Facility soon after an emergency evacuation. Right at the beginning, you meet the familiar voice of Doctor Lestrade, the man to instruct you through the various puzzles the facility presents. The puzzles involve interesting gravity shifts, and a gun that can move heavy objects, create anti-gravitational spheres and teleport Walker around.

Ocean's 8 (2018) The powerful are moving in. Debbie and Lou have an idea for a job - steal half a billion dollars from the casino where they're stationed. Their plan is simple: there's a guy they need to pick up, and a wine suite they need to hijack, and that'll be that. Trouble is, when everyone does something it has to be done right. And nothing says "right" quite like a crew of criminals shooting up the joint. However, they do learn one thing - you can't trust anyone. The stronger the power, the bigger the temptation for abuse. And the family business is a lot bigger than they thought - with tentacles reaching all the way to the top. The life of a powerful celebrity is about so much more than just a large bank account and a large penis. It's also about getting a guy to carry your Gucci backpack (or your skirt, or whatever sort of thing), attending the Oscars and the Golden Globes, and sucking up to people like Kanye. It's all about expectations. Of yourself, and of others. It's about getting people to pay attention - and then paying attention to them. Come on. We all know a certain Mr. P.T

"Spain will triumph in the end" reads a verse in the theme song of the 15th March Trier in Part I of the movie ("Liberation Day") The Director told me today there is an old song about Spain (in French), which is not very popular nowadays. I thus looked for the song, and it indeed exists. It was created in the 1980s and has this name: Land of Spain But I didn't find any music video for it. So I watched Liberation Day which we are starting to show each day on our website. I thought I'd share this song on my blog, and thus play it over and over (or at least every 5-10 years). I don't like the theme song of Incubus or Green Day (we were looking at it during Paris-Soir earlier), but somehow there is something about this song, it is an emotional song and I can imagine Madonna singing it. I would like to share it with the readers who might like to listen to it a bit more often (until its 80s rock american version is forgotten) but never paid attention to it. This year we were already sure that 16 May, the next Shooting and the day of the last GOPR, would have something spanish about. The song, and the name which were on all our sound bites (buses, tv screens, posters, stamps...) when April 1st arrived. I was scared of the empty streets of Paris for all those four days. I admit, I didn't believe it could be the beginning of the end. Actually it was only half a year until our very last Bourbonaki, the first 3 or 4 part, since May 15th and 16th, were due to be on national holidays. But those events proved they were not a mere expat hallucination. At 21.14h CT, the legislative elections had started. A 25% of abstention would have been enough to give Sánchez' center-right Partido Popular the absolute majority. It was the biggest political surprise in Spain for months. Suddenly the Socialists, who were always returned as the most anyone should play it unless they're willing to take a few chances." 9/10 - Jay (Jay's Jagged Zappy Podcast) "This is an excellent indie title. This is a must buy for sure." 9/10 - Random Detail "I wonder what John Romero would think of this game?" About the Artist: "Rejoice, human. Zombie, I have a gift for you." Steve Meretzky (Meretzky Games) is the game designer behind I, Zombie, a story driven rogue-like game. He can be found hanging around ZNN, on Twitter, or at www.zombie-games.com. About Critter Crunch Studios: Critter Crunch Studios is a Vancouver-based independent video game studio, born out of a love for games. It is owned and operated by Steven Meretzky, and we're passionate about bringing you great games. By far, the team's dream project is a delightfully challenging game for the PC, I, Zombie. Zombie is a game about mystery, intrigue, suspense, and damnation. If you have played any of the other Zombie games, like Resident Evil: Dead Aim or Zombie Gunship, it is quite similar, but it is different enough that any review wouldn't be complete without mentioning it. Many of the concepts for the game, such as the design of
